

Mouth ulcers

This is a common problem in childhood. Most mouth ulcers are not usually related to an underlying systemic disease, but clearly cause concern about such associations, for example IBD or coeliac disease. They are also associated with iron, folate and vitamin B12 deficiency. A simple reference guide is available on request via the embedded GI e-mail, which has been developed by us and Dr Fiona Crawford at the Oral Medicine dept at the Lauriston Building.

Last Updated on Sunday, 13 March 2011 14:35